

Council welcomes new CEO

Thursday, 15 June 2023

Alice Springs Town Council would like to announce the appointment of Andrew Wilshire to the role of CEO of ASTC.

Mr Wilshire comes to Alice Springs with a wealth of executive experience across a range of industries, including the retail, hospitality, tourism, and agricultural sectors which are important to the Alice Springs community. He also has significant experience across corporate and public affairs, enterprise health and safety, operational management and financial management.

“After a rigorous process, Council are excited to welcome Andrew as our new CEO. Andrew’s experience made him a terrific candidate and a great asset to the Alice Springs community,” Mayor Matt Paterson said.

“I am looking forward to working alongside Andrew to achieve great things for Alice Springs. I am confident that he will hit the ground running and we will see tremendous results in the short and long term.”

Mr Wilshire will commence at ASTC from Monday 19 June, bringing a wealth of experience in developing and executing strategy, implementing organisational change initiatives, operational management and financial acumen to the role.

“I am thrilled to join the team at Alice Springs Town Council and look forward to achieving results for the entire community,” Mr Wilshire said.

“It’s clear that Alice Springs Town Council is an exciting place to be at the moment with a range of incredible upcoming projects. I am keen to keep driving these projects forward while ensuring Council continues to deliver a high level of services to all residents.”

Council thanks Joe McCabe for serving as interim CEO from February. Mr McCabe will finish with Council on 14 July to allow for a smooth transition period.
