New CEO welcomed

Alice Springs Town Council would like to formally announce the commencement of its new Chief Executive Officer, Mr Robert Jennings.

"I'm very much looking forward to making my way around the community and getting to know everyone" said CEO Robert Jennings.

"It is exciting times ahead for Alice Springs Town Council and I'm pleased to now call myself, and my young family, Centralians!"

Previously, the CEO for four and a half years at Katherine Town Council, Robert has a thorough understanding of the Northern Territory, its communities and the unique challenges of delivering municipal services in regional Australia. He has served as an executive officer in local government across three states and territories and is a member of the Northern Territory Planning Commission.

Robert also has extensive experience in the private sector for a national sustainable development company and as a Registered Architect. He has over twenty years' experience across a wide range of fields including infrastructure, project management, sustainability and alternative energy, emergency management, land development, urban planning and architecture, construction and community and economic development. Robert is a member of Regional Development Australia NT, is educated as an architect and economist and has an extensive international background.

Robert first Council meeting will be the September Committee meeting to be held at 5.30pm, Monday 16 September 2019.
